

LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS.

Trials in the Police Court—Two Convicted and Several Acquitted.

At the afternoon session of the Police Court yesterday Judge Miller heard evidence in several liquor cases. It was a good day for the liquor men, as in each instance the court acquitted the defendant. Thomas J. Daly, who does business in South Washington, was up on a charge of unlicensed bar. He had already been convicted, but the court had granted him a new trial on motion of Attorney Charles H. Bradley, the principal witness for the District, was recalled. His evidence was different from that given at the former hearing. He said now he could not tell exactly what he did in Daly's place because he was drunk. Prosecuting Attorney Dumont gave up the case and wrote the following indictment on the motion of "Witness Bradley N. G. Nolle pro, this 16th day of May."

John H. Siss was called on a similar case and Henry Shillingford defended him. He examined Bradley with a result similar to that in the other case.

Joseph Siss, president of the German-American Club, was charged with keeping an unlicensed bar. Siss was among those whose liquor applications were rejected. Lawyer Close claimed that his client acted as president of the club and not as an individual. The prosecution called witnesses, but being unable to prove a single sale, the case was dismissed.

One charge of violating the Sunday law against J. H. Deakley was dismissed. Deakley was called by the prosecution, but he was not present. He was defended by Attorney J. H. Deakley.

Vernon H. Rockhold, formerly proprietor of the Supreme House, was charged with a violation of the Sunday law. Lawyer Close claimed that the house had been transferred to Patrick Phillips. As the liquor license was still in Rockhold's name, the court held him liable and imposed a fine of $20. Counsel noted an appeal.

There was a charge of keeping an unlicensed bar against Dudley Wheeler. She did not appear for trial and her collateral, $105, was forfeited.

Clay Didn't Wait.

An article in Thursday's Star says that Henry Clay "was elected Senator when he was only twenty-nine years old, and he had to wait until he was thirty before he took his seat." Mr. Clay was born April 12, 1777, and the Senate journal shows that on December 29, 1806, he "took his seat in the Senate." Hence he did not wait until he was thirty. Tradition says that on his admission he was asked if he was of the constitutional age and he replied: "Go and ask my constituents." There is no record of this in the journal nor in the annals.

The Humane Society.

To the Editor of THE EVENING STAR: It is a sure sign that the civilization of a city is keeping pace with its material growth when the people take pride in generously supporting institutions for the care of the weak, the helpless, and foremost among good works is the rearing of helpless children from neglect and abuse and the relief of our patient friends, the animals, from unnecessary burdens. In New York, Boston and Chicago, indeed in all our large cities, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is a power, while people who come to Washington to spend the winter are constantly distressed by the bad treatment horses receive in the streets, and are surprised that the Humane Society is restricted in its efforts by a lack of support and sympathy. With an approving public sentiment and generous support of the Society in its efforts to ameliorate the condition of animals in the suppression of all unnecessary suffering, and to provide for the permanent bettering of their condition by instituting a system of humane teaching in the public schools, a great advance in moral progress would be made, and a step taken toward a kingdom in which "goodness and mercy go hand in hand."

The attention of the public is invited to the meeting appointed for tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the hall of the Washington branch of the Humane Society, which will be addressed by several eloquent speakers especially interested in the reforms it represents. The meeting will be presided over by Commissioner Douglass.

The interesting program includes addresses by Representative Beckridge of Kentucky and Representative Greenleaf of Massachusetts. The latter is the pastor of All Souls Church, and some excellent music. The regular evening contribution of the church will be devoted by consent of the church trustees to the aid of the Society.

Senator Beck's Will. Yesterday the will of the late Jas. Burnie Beck was filed in the Probate Court and admitted to probate, and letters of administration, w. s. was granted to Blair Lee on a bond of $30,000. The will is dated April 26, 1856, and leaves his property to his wife during her life, and after her death to his children, and names the wife executor, requesting that she be appointed guardian of his children, John C. Beckridge, the petitioner filed by Mrs. Bettie Beck Goodie and George Thornton Beck states that the deceased died in March, 1857, that the personal estate is almost wholly in the District of Columbia, and does not exceed $20,000 in value.

School Teachers' Attention.—Would you like to take a trip to Europe this summer free of all expense? If so, read the Washington Sunday Herald next Sunday and find out how you can do it.—Advt.

Hours of Labor of Post Office Clerks. With the view of obtaining full and accurate information bearing upon the question of limiting the service of clerks in post offices to eight hours per day, the Postmaster General has requested all postmasters to send a report of the number of hours per day in which the clerks in their respective offices are required to work, in blank form of reply, furnished calling for this information during each of the four quarters of last year in each of the six principal office divisions separately, viz: Executive, mailing, city delivery, express, order, registry, and branch offices or stations.

Remembered by the Printers. When Dr. Gallinger was a member of Congress from New Hampshire he probably had more friends among the printers than any other man in public life. The doctor has been here for the past few days and on Thursday night about forty followers of Faust and Gutenberg called on him in his room at the National Hotel to formally give utterance to their appreciation of their champion. There were a few unrepentant speculators of vocalization and a generally good time. When the company said "good-bye" the doctor's apartments were beautified and made fragrant by a magnificent floral horse shoe and a horn of plenty—tokens of affection.

Dr. Gallinger has forsaken the practice of medicine and is out of politics for the present. He is president of a big eastern syndicate that is at work building and booming a new city in Tennessee. He leaves New Hampshire for his moral field of labor early in June.

The sale of valuable unimproved property fronting about 95 feet on F street near 21st street will take place Monday at 5 o'clock p.m. and is to close an estate. The proposed extension of the Columbia railroad will pass the property. The lots will be sold separately. See advertisement.
